Body Language Master & Micro Expression Training

Nonverbal communication is more critical than ever

THE MERRILL INSTITUTE for Nonverbal Intelligence

We've all experienced communication contradictions in some form or another. A customer says they're extremely interested in buying your product, but you never hear from them again. A job applicant confidently expresses their ability to fulfill a role, but two weeks into the job it is clear they are unqualified. A research participant has a positive verbal reaction to a new product concept, but somehow their body language is not quite so convincing.

Learn how to spot these contradictions with nonverbal intelligence training. Beyond adding to your professional skillset, this training will help you understand and communicate more effectively with the most important people in your personal and professional lives.

In addition to his four decades of conducting face-to-face research among thousands of consumers and professionals globally, David M. Schneer, Ph.D. formed the Merrill Institute for Nonverbal Intelligence to complete his vision of teaching others how to decode the nonverbal language of our bodies.
